

“Since the early 1970’s there is hardly an institution or convention of Australia life that has not been subject to serious challenge or radical change.” Ian Burnley (urban geographer)

“Australia does not reflect patterns of geographical and economic entrapment evident in cities overseas that have hardened ethnic “ghettos” or “enclaves.”

“The culture of anxiety that pervades public discussion and private behaviour in suburban Australia might well be dissipated if we were to re-establish public spaces, facilities and services that invite inclusive participation and interaction by all”. Brendan Gleeson Making Space For Hope In The Suburbs
